PROLOGUE

We face, at the start,
mere buildings, with steps and doors
and walls, halls and lockers;
even the unfrocked guides of our four-year destinies seem to have caught the cool fever of the institutional IBM.
Not yet is everyone the humane, passionate,
and friendly sharer of our perplexities.
But there are glimpses.

The glimpses grow.
Each day our observations show
we are not simply units factored from the total of our parts.
For, despite our frequent collectivity
of interest and of purpose,
our solitude defines us, too.

There are moments when our vision seems to get no higher than the third floor;
when the boundries of our wide hopes are narrowed by the restless scramble to get somewhere, on time, prepared.
The laughter and the small talk and the hurry are not so meaningless as they may seem.
The living faces and the painted mottoes
complete each other's relevance.

In Thy light Shall We See Light
PSALM 36:9B

Sometimes talk and laughter cease (although sophisticated barriers still interfere when, pressured by devotion, we find that some have given cliché meaning) and mysteriously alone, yet mystically united,
we do our best to worship.
Mere acquaintance climbs to love, inspired by the atmosphere of love,
and a body of believers, however poor,
find richness in the hearing of a promise and a deed.

Refreshed in our return to the problems of a small world
we find the strength to start another week.
It is spirituality of a higher sort that does not balk at wrestling with the concerns of finance, fun, development and discipline,
schedules and curriculum,
and where and how
and at what time
to park your car.

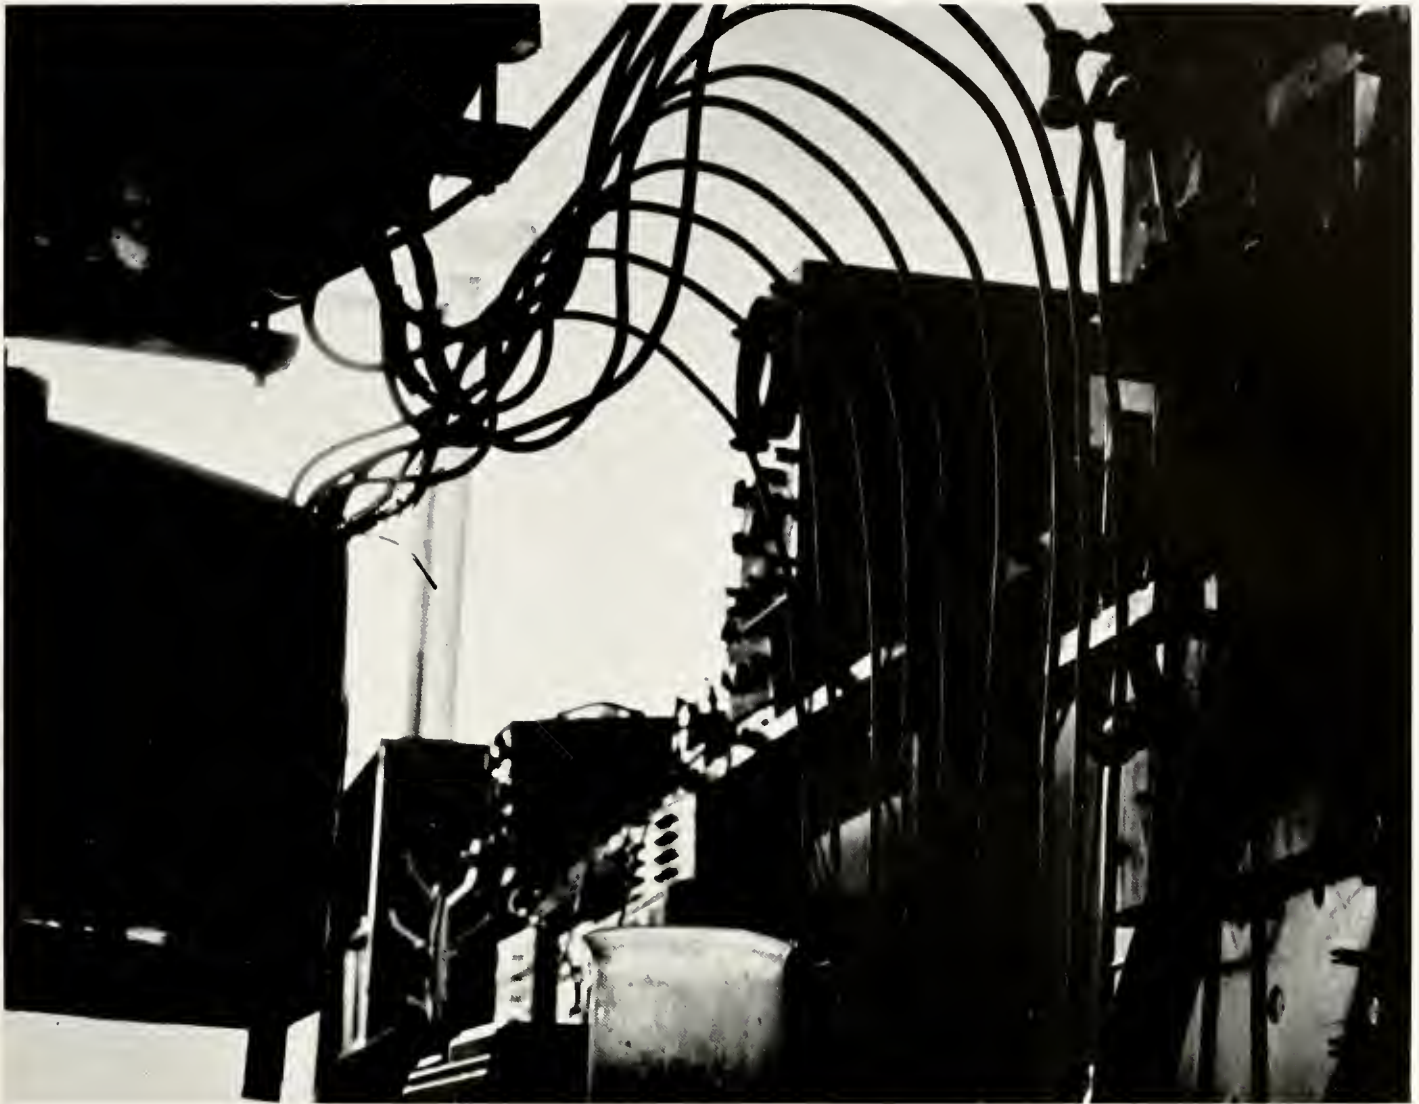

Never are our buildings only storage places,
cool warehouses for high and windy knowledge,
for in every corner one finds the marks of habitation; we have not escaped
the population boom but must adjust to it.
Each of us has left a mark; visible in desks and steps, invisible in the atmosphere and spirit for which the catch-word
"Calvin Spark"
is only an approximation.

The nature of our studies becomes determined by our likes and dislikes; vague and arbitrary lines are drawn (at times with a great deal of noise)
between the book and the machine,
the lecture and the lab.
Sociologist and engineers
fight for their right to be categorized.
Forgotten is the fact of our mutual need.
Although means may differ,
ends remain the same.

Never out of sight
but quite often out of mind,
the seminary exists, for most of us,
only as the butt of many jokes,
the breeding-ground of strange behavior.
In the face of dedication which we cannot easily understand our laughter rings defensively.
We believe, mistakenly, that men can form ideals,
when actually, despite their accent
or their lack of one,
it is the other way around.

For some of us, escape from books
and papers, classes and reports,
is all too easy.
Subtle aid to the school psychologist,
the social whirl attempts to combat melancholia:
the age-old occupational disease of scholars.
For those who are not scholars, nor wish to be,
the social life becomes the norm,
destroying its own reason for existence.

For some, the arts take precedence;
between the clean white covers of a Lit Review,
in concert, or before the footlights,
individual hopes and fears take shape in forms that give them universal meaning.
Under the watchful administrative eye,
and despite the bans on un-nice words
and deaths on stage,
they achieve communication.
For a few brief moments we catch a larger and a different vision of our small world.

All our work, even all our lives,
each week become re-consecrated in praise beneath the Cross.
For each, according to his need,
the Church becomes a blunt reminder of transcendence and a silent holy place
of contemplation.
In song and prayer
and preaching of the Word
we find again the Meaning of our lives,
however poor our quality of worship.

Devoutly wishing that each arrow will pierce the target and not the instructor, or trying to force the ball into the basket
by sheer collective mental effort, we find our individual wishes caught up in a collective hope.
Bonded by excitement, made one through noise,
we may wonder why it all seems so important.
Until the next time, when we play and shout
as intently and as loudly as before.

Graduation is a time for pictures,
proud parental looks, good wishes
and good-byes.
For some the end of books and study.
Under all the preparation and rehearsal,
through the endless lines,
each action takes particular meaning
by the fact of its finality.
One cannot help but feel humility, deep thankfulness, and some fearful wondering at where four years have gone.
But it's not so much that something's ended
as that something's about to begin.

To those men who have given of themselves to make Calvin what it is, we can only, in the smallest of ways, show our appreciation. To Mr. William B. Eerdmans, Sr., whose youthful vision has inspired scholarly dedication, and who has provided the outlets for such dedication, we can only attempt the expression of our indebtedness. To him we owe the establishment of the Calvin Foundation and the Literary Review awards; he has also provided the impetus for the projected Calvin microfilm collection, an invaluable tool for the serious student. With these aids to the advancement of orthodox Reformed scholarship, Mr. Eerdmans has shown his life to be one of dedication and calling. For his awareness of the needs of Calvin's students, for his knowledge of the trends of learning, for the opportunities he has provided for expression, for the concern and the love with which he has always regarded our school, we offer this tribute.

A dedication of this sort, cast in the formal and mechanical mold of words and pictures, can never do justice to the personality of the man to whom it is presented, and, in a very real sense, is superfluous to that image. It is superfluous, for it can add nothing to the living personality of Mr. Leo Cayvan; it is unjustified, for it can in no way outline the extent of his gifts to the students of Calvin College, whether those gifts be material: as the collection of recordings presented the college in 1952, the free use of his musical instruments, or the opening of his home to our young musicians; or whether those gifts be spiritual: the unflickering warmth of his humor, his love, and his spiritual devotion. Humbly then, and with the knowledge that our limitations have already been forgiven by this generous man, we dedicate this book.

BOOK J

Academic Life

Faculty members, too, find time to enjoy college life—conversation over a cup of coffee, a break between classes, or a conference at the Manor House. A day in front of a class can be as trying as a day in front of a professor, and the brief rests are welcome.

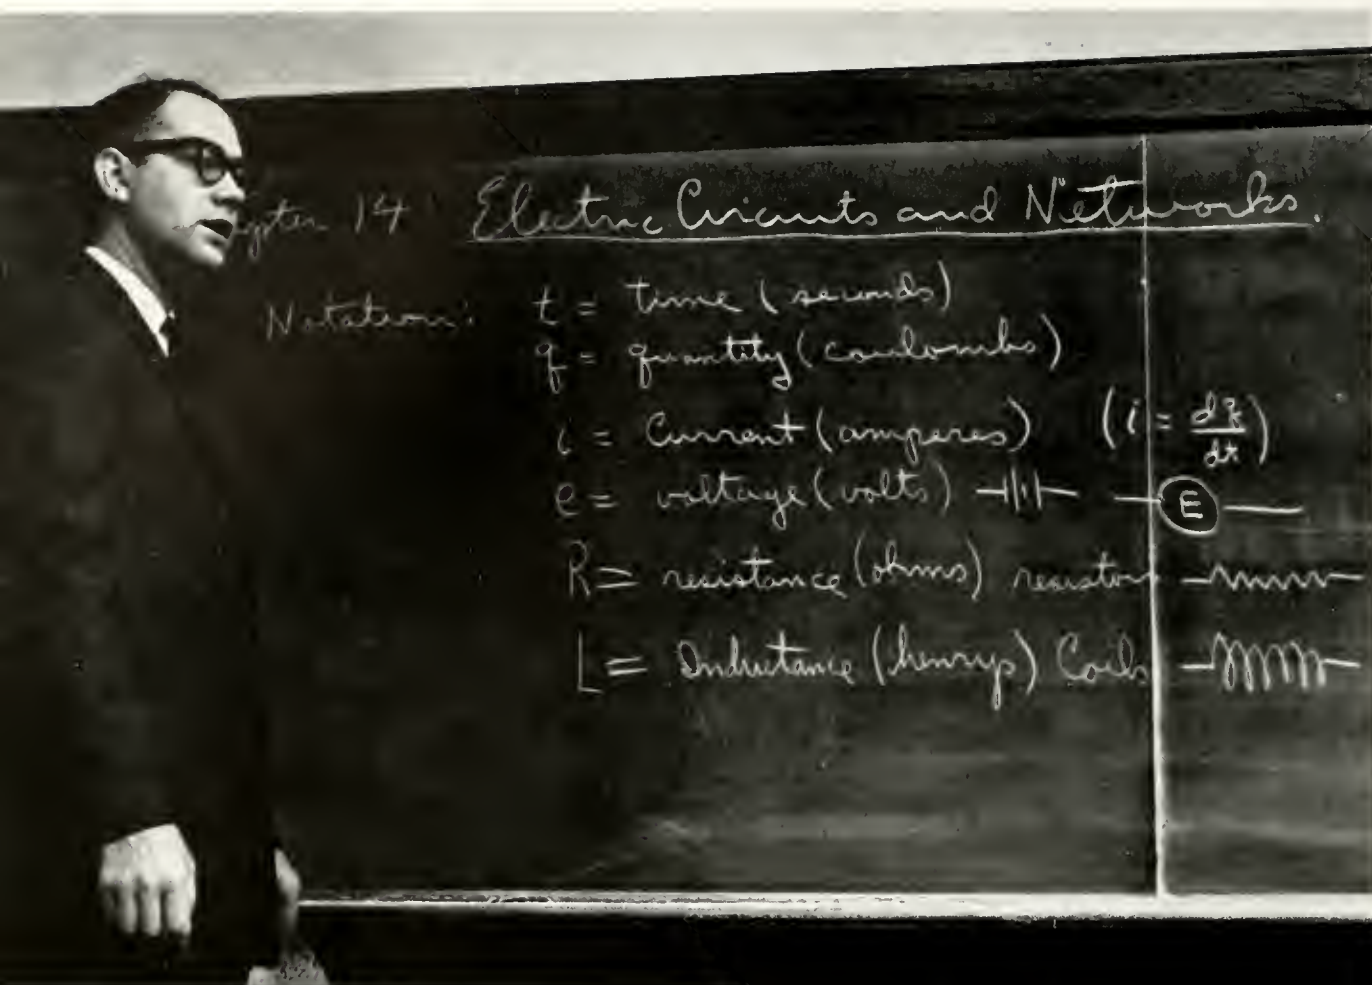

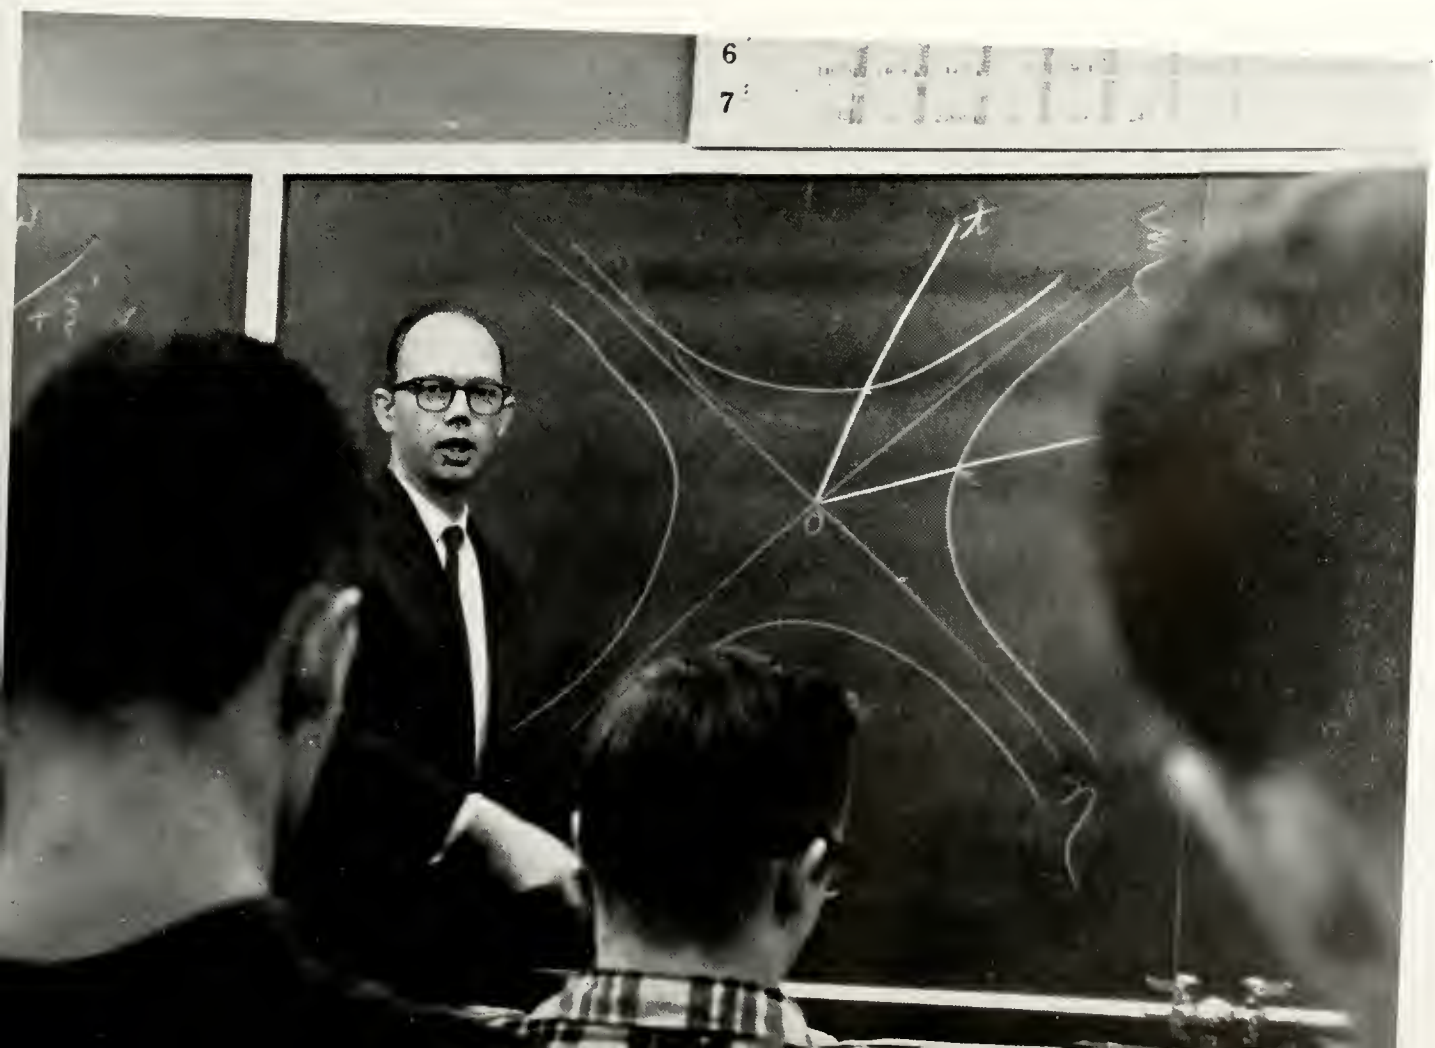

But teaching is a full-time profession, and the teacher cannot separate himself from his work. Much of his "spare time" is spent guiding and assisting students in club meetings, laboratories, and offices.

The primary purpose of Calvin, as any other college, is to instruct. It is in this capacity that the faculty serves us most obviously, and it is through the classroom that most of us become best acquainted with the faculty members—some slightly eccentric, many of them great, but all of them dedicated to their profession.

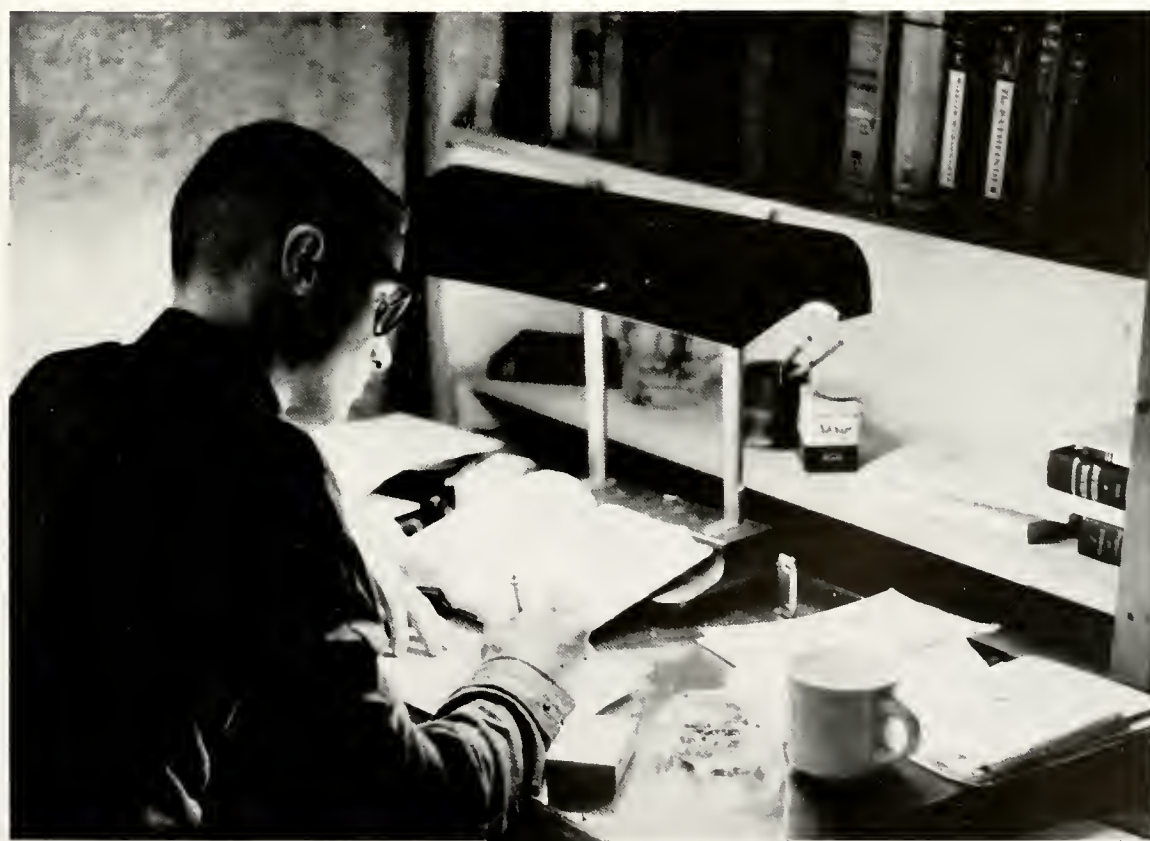

For some, the science building is used only for registration; for others, it becomes a home. Protons and neutrons, elements and compounds, fish and frogs, are carefully scrutinized during long laboratory periods as students seek to unlock the mysteries of a lab manual.

Between the coffee breaks, dates, and jam sessions, Calvin students also find time to study; for a college is intended to provide education, and education involves study. The library, a laboratory, a desk in the corner of a room or apartment—these can never be completely ignored.

The library—a house for books, a room for study, a second lounge—is as familiar to some as a laboratory is to others. Among the books, magazines, and card catalogs, students study or relax or make plans for a coffee date at the Commons.

The Fine Arts

The A Cappella Choir under the direction of Professor Seymour Swets participated in various programs, a spring tour, the Fall Music Festival, and in the Biennial Intercollegiate Choral Festival. The Radio Choir under the direction of Professor James De Jonge continued to hold a larger audience than any other campus organization. Besides its part in the weekly "Back to God Hour" the Radio Choir also presented several concerts, participated in the Fall Music Festival, and toured the Mid-West.

The Oratorio Society presented The Messiah by Handel and The Elijah by Mendelssolun. This year's performance of The Messiah marked a tradition of forty years. This tradition has meant different things to us. It has meant weekly rehearsals and details to those of us who perform. It has meant Christmas and entertainment to those of us in the audience. But to those of us performing and to those of us in the audience it has meant a religious experience.

The seventy-five piece Concert Band participated in the Fall Music Festival, presented concerts, and went on tour during spring vacation. This year the band was invited to participate in the Michigan Band and Orchestra Conference in January. Students interested in stringed rather than brass instruments continued to gather at the home of Mr. Cayvan for the traditional Saturday night chamber music sessions.

The musical entertainment presented by the music department this year included not only concerts by the musical organizations and recitals by students and visiting artists, but also an opera. Giani Schicci, a comedy by Puccini, was presented under the direction of Professor De Jonge. The scene of the action in the opera is thirteenth century Italy. The action itself is humorous.

The Calvin Thespians under the direction of Mrs. Edgar Boevé worked with drama representative of different types and periods. The fall production was Jean Anouilh's version of the Greek classic Antigone. Antigone, written originally by Sophocles, was re-written by Anouilh in France during the German occupation of the Second World War.

The Old Lady Shows Her Medals by J. M. Barrie was produced by the Thespians on campus. This play has its setting in London during the First World War. The play was staged by the Thespians as theatre-in-the-round. This production along with Antigone and the spring production, Moliere's Tartuffe, gave the student body an opportunity to give some notice to various forms of drama.

When the Winter Literary Review came out this year the list of contributors was long and many of the contributions were impressive. Apparently the list of readers was also long, for the Winter Literary Review with its enigmatic cover was sold-out the second day. The Spring Literary Review shared its cover with the Fine Arts Festival Anthology. In spite of the lack of precedent, the work on this year's Fine Arts Festival proceeded smoothly with the help of an adequate budget and faculty consultants. The number of entries and quality of many of them showed that the Fine Arts Festival does deserve a place among the traditions of Calvin College.

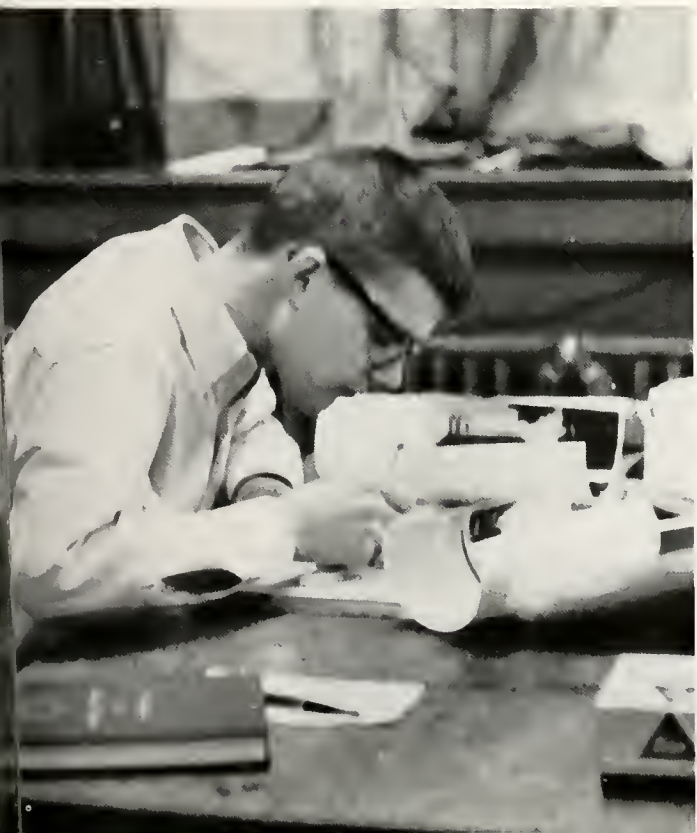

Calvin students again competed in intercollegiate debate, oratory, interpretative reading, and extemporaneous speaking. The Readers' Theatre, directed by Dr. Ann Janssen, presented Shakespeare's Othello in the fall and Milton's Samson Agonistes in the spring. These evenings proved to be among the most memorable of the year to the small number of students that attended the performances.

The publications Chimes and Prism again attempted to say something significant about Calvin College. Although harassed by delinquency of staff members, and haunted by recollections of the grand editorial traditions, Don Coray and Paul Vanden Bout managed to meet dead-lines. The Chimes maintained a high level of writing throughout each edition. It was widely read and seemed to be representative of student opinion. Perhaps this was a weakness. The Prism staff quietly went about its work trying to say something just once.

Social Life

The Mixer at Knollcrest gives Calvin students their first opportunity to acquaint themselves with new students. Freshmen gain valuable experience at "push-ball" for their annual mobbing of the "coops." Throughout the year, various class and club parties provide social life.

Dates for all times, places, and events: church, basketball games, pizza, bowling, studying, skiing, programs at nearby auditoriums, and the ever awaited banquets.

Homecoming, almost lost between exams and registration, was rescued by a lovely queen and gracious court. Old and new students exclaimed over snow cars, rockets, crowns, Calvinacs, and sparks, while making new and remaking old acquaintances over the coffee cups.

Serving as hostess at the many Homecoming events was Queen Virginia Vander Wall, assisted by the members of her court—Irene Bossenbroek, Jeanne Holwerda, Helen Steenwyk, and Carol Beversluis.

Alumni especially enjoyed the good judge and weeping bride of Gilbert and Sullivan's Trial by Jury as played by their classmates. The trilled Scottish r's rolled easily off stage and turned an audience to laughter as old "Red" returned from the "dead" in Lady Gregory's Spreading the Word.

Student Council went about its business with much ado about little. The budget was faithfully reported, the elections were honestly won, and films and posters were carefully censored for student viewing. New this year is the Student Council office in the Commons.

Whether it be rooms, apartments, dorms, or "coops," they all provide besides a place to live a place for quiet reading, private conversations, and relaxation from the frenzied schedule of the average day.

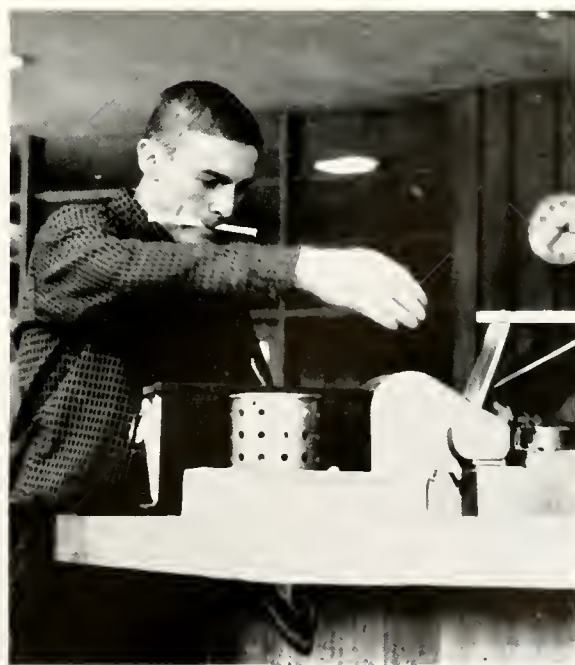

Just sitting, talking, or reading, make up a great part of "coop" life. But the mischievous feats performed with the gaiety and confusion, so well known in the "coops," provide events which bear many repeated tellings.

The Coffee Shop is more than part of the Commons, and to most consists of long discussions, news and gossip, tiny circles of seated people, comparisons of blue books and fellow students, elbows on table tops, eager leaning, listening, and laughing, and deep Bible-black coffee in anemic green cups.

The Commons is a hub, a stop-over for anyone looking for friends or wishing to call others, a news center, and a place to wait. The dining room opens with its warmth of the cafeteria nook to a scene of people sitting, standing, getting and returning, and the constant hum of voices and the clatter of the scullery.

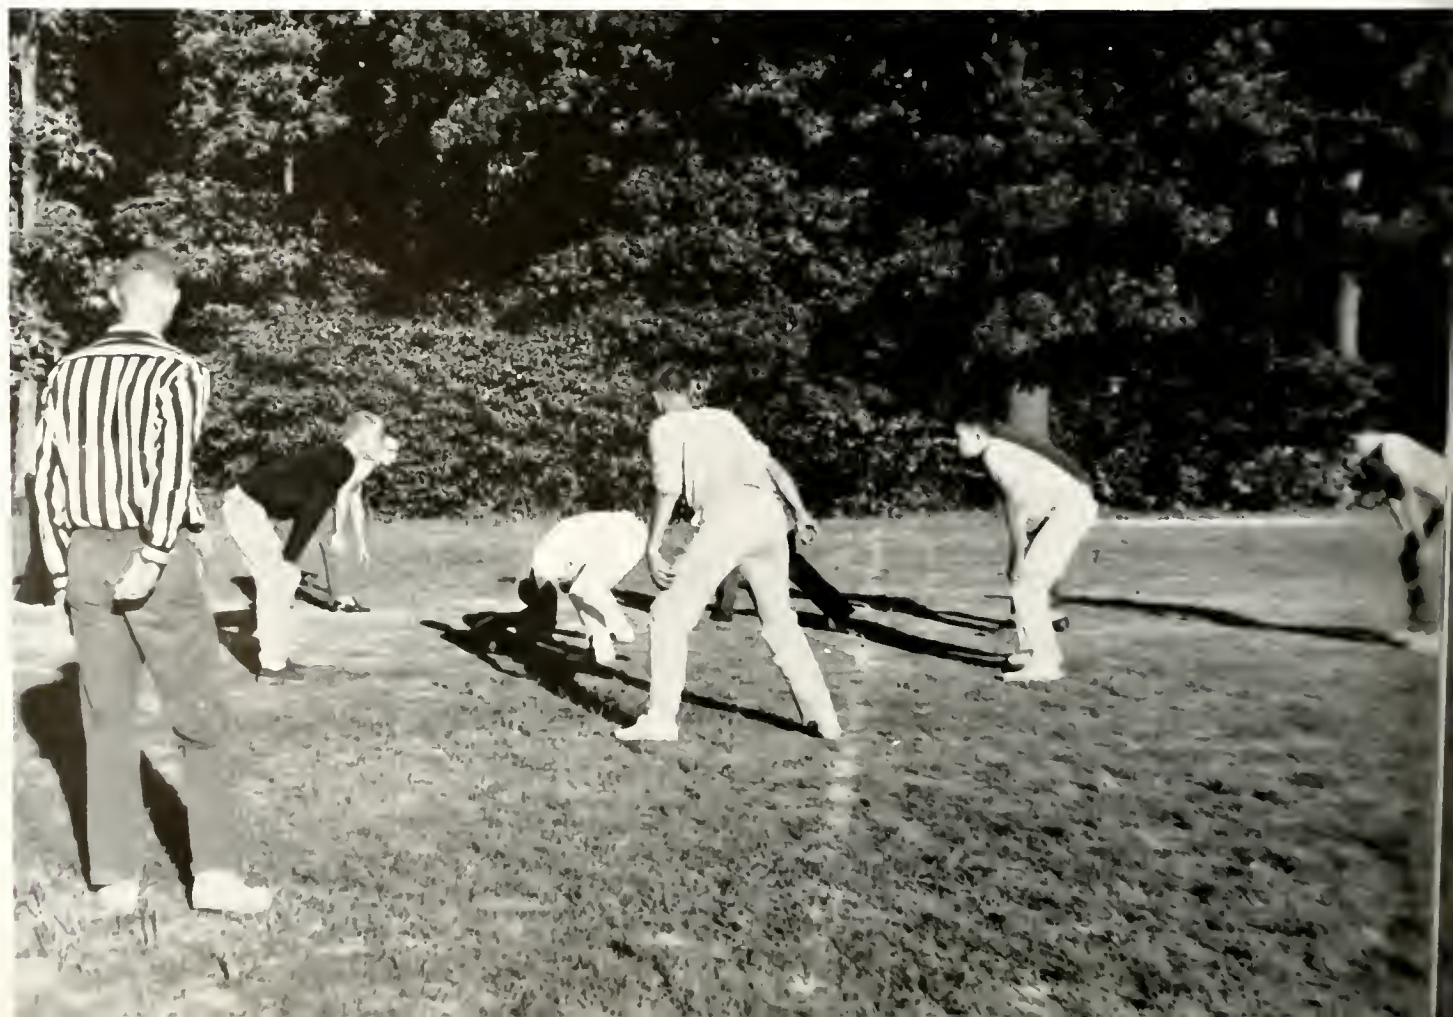

Athletics

Every fall, the East Campus athletic field becomes the scene of feverish activity as the intramural football leagues swing into action. The 1959 champions were the Rezoobs, a sophomore team, which edged the Rahs in the playoffs.

Following closely on the heels of football is volleyball. 1959 marked the invasion of the faculty into intramurals; and, displaying awesome power, the Faculty-Sem All-Stars swept through an undefeated season to take the intramural championship.

Intramural activity reaches its peak with the coming of basketball. On any given evening one can find the gym crowded with players and spectators. This year participation was at a record high, with thirty teams competing in the four leagues.

After the intramural basketball leagues had completed their schedules, a seeded, double elimination tournament was organized.

Meanwhile, oblivious to all this strenuous activity, the intramural bowling teams spent their spare afternoons in the air-conditioned comfort of Holiday Lanes.

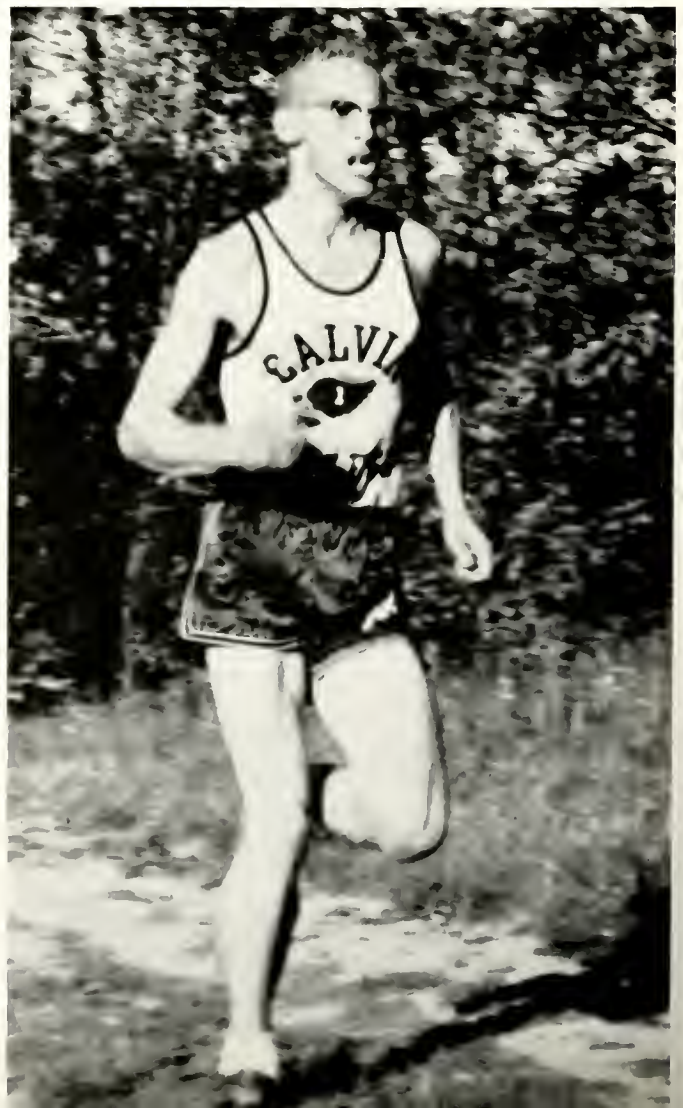

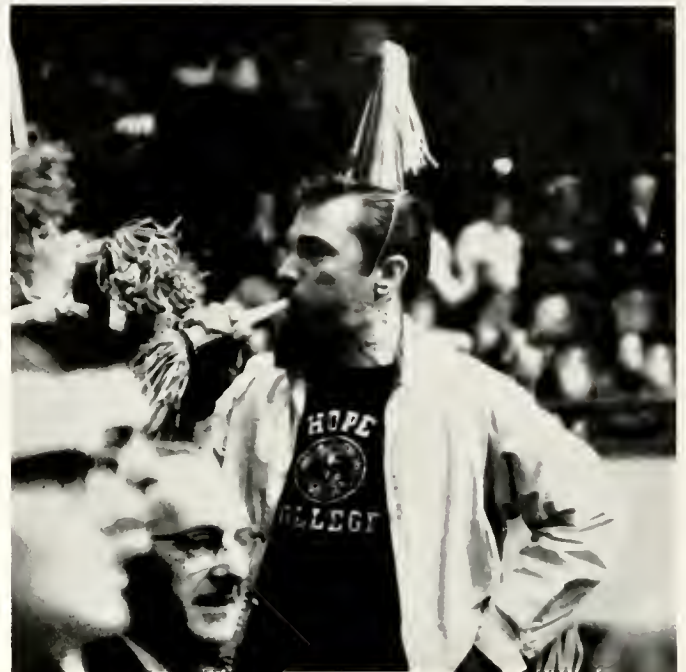

This year the cross-country team swept through all their MIAA dual meets undefeated. At the end of the season, Knight star Barry Koops captured first place in the all-MIAA meet to lead Calvin to its second consecutive cross-country championship.

The soccer team went through its second season in the Midwest Soccer Conference with mixed success, culminated by the selection of goalie Casey Ter Haar to the conference All-Star Team.

The high point of every basketball season is reached with the annual Calvin-Hope game at the Civic Auditorium. Win or lose, it is the major topic of conversation for weeks afterward. Along with the usual long lines and crowded bleachers, this year's game had the added attraction of a Hope Fraternity circus with a menagerie of freshmen.

The Knights ended the 1959-60 season with an overall record of 16 wins and five losses. In MIAA competition, they had a 12-2 record, and captured second place. With only one senior on the squad, the Knights have high hopes and a six game winning streak for next year.

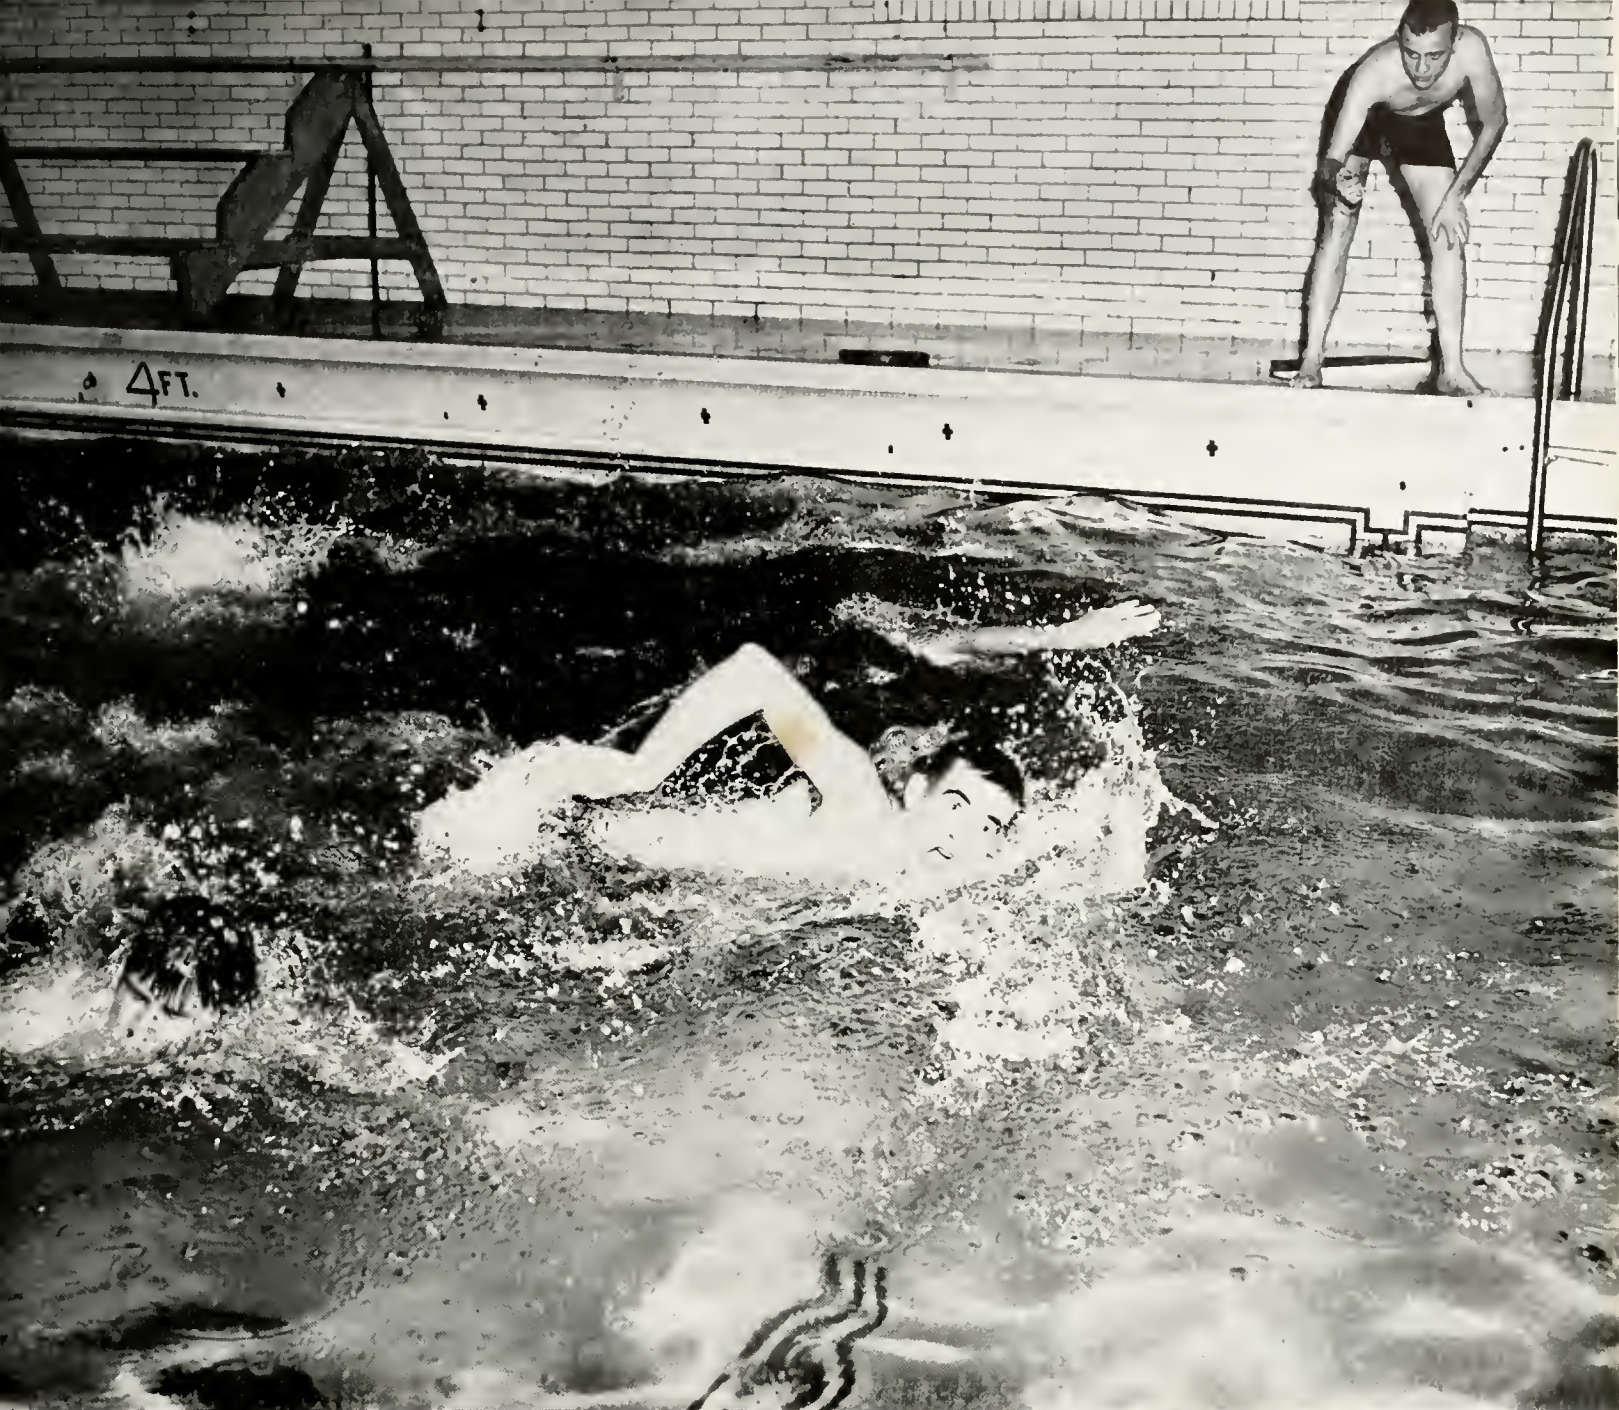

The newest addition to the Calvin basketball schedule is an invitational tournament, played during the Christmas recess. The First Annual Calvin Invitational was held January 1 and 2, with Central Michigan, Northern Michigan, Wooster of Ohio, and Calvin participating. The Knights lost the opener to Northern Michigan, but came back to win the consolation game from Wooster.

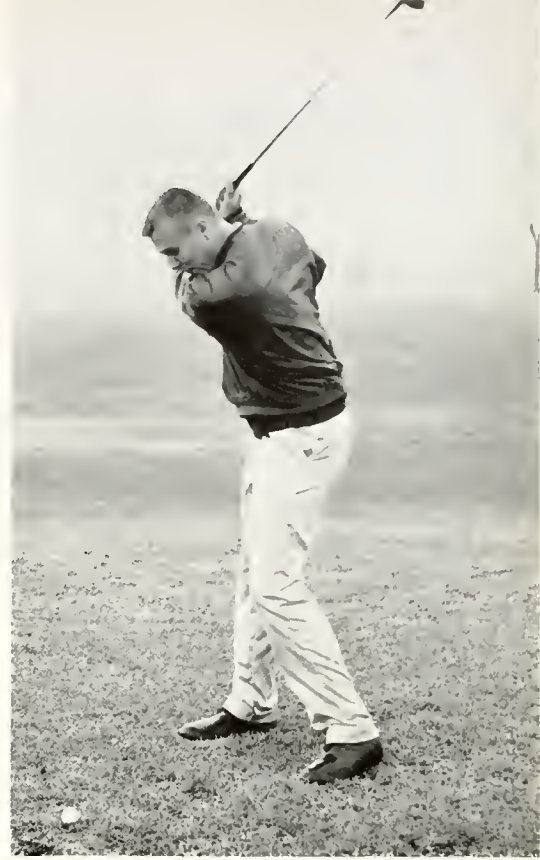

Calvin's junior varsity, bolstered by a tall forward line and hampered by ineligibilities, went through a typical JV season, playing the usual assortment of City League teams, intramural teams, and occasionally, even other JV teams. The Knighties romped through another fine season which saw them take the Grand Rapids City championship and make trips to Detroit and Chicago for tournaments. Denied a pool to practice in, the swimming team splashed their way through an enjoyable though inept season.

As soon as the snow is off the ground, Franklin Park becomes the scene of feverish action. On any given afternoon, one may find tennis matches and baseball games in progress side by side, and sweat-clothed trackmen circling both on their endless practice runs. Meanwhile, the golfers, oblivious to all this strenuous activity meander lazily down the green fairways, content to compete for Calvin their own way.

The Seminary

He may be found anywhere—slumped in a chair in a far corner of the stacks, busy at his desk at home, reclining on a couch dangerously near the TV set. Before him may be Barth's Church Dogmatics or Pope Pius XI's Casti Connubii, Kittel's Biblia Hebraica or Hinduism's Upanishads. Coram Deo the seminary student is engaged in his primary work.

They are called assignments, but the name reveals little of their significance. Uneasiness and timidity, joy and inspiration, dissatisfaction with self and thanksgiving to God—all emotions resolve into a fervent prayer for the Spirit's gift. In his weakness and Christ's strength the seminarian speaks the message of infinite power, sola fide, sola gratia.

Twenty minutes of each day, at coffee, three classes and numerous individuals become a corps. In twenty minutes a week's recreation is planned, news of augmented families is spread, and classroom mischief is plotted. In twenty minutes the denomination is reviewed, its congregations assessed, and its publications evaluated. Seminarians each day find time to live together, corpus servorum Christi.

One day this past fall a doctor of theology picked up a shovel in the presence of a shivering group of spectators. Several times this year seminarians and friends stopped to examine an architect's model. And as the spring thaw set in, the Knollcrest mud gave witness of frequent visitors. With enthusiastic anticipation seminarians dream of the future, sola Deo gloria.
